Bookstore Operational

After being without a credit card processing gateway for five long weeks, we are back up and able to once again receive electronic transactions for books, CDs, and donations on our various Web sites. That is, we are able to so as of this writing. The frequency of removal and/or denial of credit card processing services as a means of censorship has increased, with quasi-mainstream figures like right-wing conspiracy theorist Alex Jones now feeling its effects. Jones may claim he has been singled out for denials of service for "hate speech" or "bullying," but he hasn't been subjected to the continuous deplatforming that our National Alliance bookstore has suffered over the past year with the loss of seven service providers!

We have expanded our cryptocurrency acceptance capability. We can now accept Bitcoin and several other cryptocurrencies directly through the Web site's shopping cart for all products. Of course, one needs to have a cryptocurrency wallet to make such a transaction, but it isn't difficult to set one up. In fact, clicking on our "pay by Bitcoin" button, for example, will direct the shopper to a Web site where he can quickly sign up for the appropriate wallet.

We have learned the hard way that electronic payment systems of any kind are the easiest for our enemies to sabotage — so, again, mailing cash, money orders, or checks is still the preferred method for purchasing material at https://cosmotheistchurch.org/.

We have just added seven classic titles to our online bookstore. There is a limited supply of some of these titles so act fast if interested, before they sell out. Five hardback editions by WWII historian David Irving — Goebbels, Churchill's War, Apocalypse: 1945, Nuremberg, and T*he War Between the Generals;* as well as Revilo P, Oliver's America's Decline and Julius Evola's Revolt Against the Modern World.

Correspondence

Dear Chairman Williams: The second check from the legal defense fund came and I want to say thank you for forwarding it to me. I'm surprised by these donations. I'd like to send thank-you letters/emails to those donors who have given permission to be contacted. Some have written me back with very pleasant things to say. These letters are huge morale boosters (like the BULLETIN is) at a time when I need an occasional boost.

Also sent to each donor at my expense has been a copy of Cosmotheism by Invictus Books, since I'm sitting on a case of 100 (minus 20 sold/given away up until now) and the occasion seems right to do so as our members and supporters are a deserving audience for it. Our member in Louisiana who is not online tells me he recently left his life-long Christian church because of its ongoing anti-White policies and thinks now it's a good idea to check out Cosmotheism. That made me wonder, how many of our members are actual Cosmotheists and seeking materials for their enlightenment? I'm glad to send them Cosmotheism. I understand your views on the shortcomings of this book, and can clearly see the flaws now, too, but until a Cosmotheist Church publication comes out to kick this book aside it will have to do for now. — Jim Mathias, Iowa

Chairman Williams responds: Jim, it was disturbing for me, reading this 13 August headline and opening paragraph at quadcities.com:

James Mathias Arrested for Attempted Burglary: DAVENPORT, Iowa — James Mathias found himself back behind bars this weekend following an arrest by LeClaire police. The 54-year-old is facing eight charges for third degree attempted burglary…

(Of course, there was no "attempted burglary" — only an honorable man placing National Alliance business cards on car windows.) Other Eastern Iowa controlled media reported on your arrest similarly, but only one, the Quad City Times, reported six weeks later that the eight politically motivated charges against you for third degree attempted "handle pulling" were dismissed:

Burglary Charges Dismissed in Case of Man Pulling on Car Doors in LeClaire: Charges have been dismissed against a Davenport man accused of pulling on door handles of multiple cars in LeClaire in August. At the time of his arrest, James L. Mathias was on probation for a felony charge of carrying weapons stemming from an incident at the Brady Street Stadium in September 2017.

Assistant Scott County Attorney Caleb Copley wrote in a motion filed Sept. 19 that although probable cause existed to file charges against Mathias, "the State does not believe that it has enough evidence at this point in time to convict the defendant beyond a reasonable doubt, and asks that this matter be dismissed pending further investigation."

There was no probable cause to arrest and jail you. None, that is, other than the intention of local law enforcement, working with your local court, local controlled media, and the Southern Poverty Law Center, to try and put a stop to your increased pamphleteering of constitutionally-protected, perfectly legal Alliance material.

More good news: donations to your defense fund during July and August, freely given to you only by those receiving this monthly internal BULLETIN — for these pages are the only place funds have been solicited for you — totaled $580 during July and August. As of this writing our members donated another $1,100 during September toward your $5,000 legal expenses, defending against that other spurious "gun on school grounds" case — prosecuted by the same man, Caleb Copely — that's now under appeal. It is so encouraging to see our membership pulling together to support you. Again, all donations to your defense should be sent to the Tennessee National Office address, made out to the National Alliance with "JM defense" stipulated, and kept separate from monthly dues and orders for material.

As for the Cosmotheism book, let's offer it free to those who donate to your defense fund, and also offer it to all others who receive the BULLETIN for $6 to cover the cost of shipping and handling. That Invictus edition is flawed but still informative for those interested in the ideology of the National Alliance. We will publish our own improved and expanded edition when we have the means to do so.

Dear Chairman Williams, here is a donation for Jim Mathias to help pay legal fees (check enclosed for $500). Jim needs to hear from all of us, if not in dollars, then encouragement and appreciation for his great effort toward defending our race and culture. — L.R., Ohio

Dear Chairman: $50 is enclosed for Jim Mathias. I am very upset that those stupid [firearm] charges against Jim were not thrown out. More harassment! That's all it is, just to throw you off. But you are showing them! It's just like Trump being attacked from all sides. This whole planet is in for a rude awakening. Just be prepared. At least we all live in the mountains where we will survive. The city be damned! All cities be damned because it's where most of the human filth resides. Take care and stay tough! — W.S., Virginia

Howdy Chairman Will! Great to hear back from you. I'm one of those inveterate "check writers" that has supported one or another nationalist groups since about 1988. You learn a lot about people and organizations when you send them money! I'm delighted that the National Alliance is back to being the National Alliance again! Like many patriots I watched in horror at the freak show of impostors "running" the Alliance in the dark years after Dr. Pierce passed away. Tremendous divine providence to have you and Kevin Strom back running the show again. I used to listen to American Dissident Voices on shortwave radio way back when before the Internet. "Millennials" have no concept of what "radio" is or what "HF transmission" or "ducting" and such mean. And they can't understand the significance of what a National Alliance broadcast in 1993 was, and the risks involved. So, keep at it, Shipmate! The new NA with you and Kevin and new good guys will do very well. Mistakes of the past can be avoided, especially when the gods have given one a second chance at life.

I have a National Vanguard Books paper catalog from 1993. I'll scan and share some pages from it to assist with "ground truthing" your rebuilding of that fine [WLP Memorial] library and collection. Might Is Right is one of those texts [from National Vanguard Books] I read all at once; a life changing document. If you can spare five copies I'll take them. I know some really good patriots and nationalists who would benefit from that book. And who knows, some may become NA members in the future... I hold the National Alliance in very high esteem; the legacy of Dr. Pierce is a national treasure. Welcome back to the fight! Very respectfully, — B.P., Florida

Chairman Williams responds: Kevin and I were both on staff with Dr. Pierce in 1993, B.P., 25 years ago! Back then, pre-Internet, I would take my Sony shortwave radio up to Dr. Pierce's mobile home each Saturday evening at 9:00 o'clock. He and Kevin, their wives and I, gathered 'round the radio over cookies and tea to listen attentively to that week's broadcast. Very revolutionary! The audiotapes of the show had been snail-mailed to the shortwave stations on Wednesday for the Saturday broadcast. Neither Kevin nor I ever left the fight — the National Alliance left us for a while during those "dark years." But, yes, the Alliance is back. Welcome back to you, too, old-timer!

We had already shipped you those five copies of Ragnar Redbeard's Might Is Right, thinking we were nearly out of stock, then discovered a cache of several cases. On Amazon.com Might sells used, starting at $50, and new, starting at over $100. We sell Might new for $15; and it's the 2005 large format, Darrell Condor edition with his outstanding introduction and more than 350 footnotes, not the disappointing smaller edition with similar cover art. Activist-minded members should consider purchasing several copies; start a book club, read and discuss the "life-changing document" together as a group. Only good can result from that. Test our new online credit card processer: https://cosmotheistchurch.org/product/might-is-right-by-ragnar-redbeard/

Dear Chairman: I am grateful and excited to now be a part of the National Alliance. I had had a desire to be useful for my European brothers and sisters nearly my whole life. This is my opportunity. After reading my first BULLETIN I wish I could say that I am shocked to learn about Jim Mathias's plight. $60 enclosed for the JM Defense Fund and $40 for 25 copies of Building a New White World and 100 NA business cards.

Since my youth I have questioned my surroundings and my role in society. I couldn't explain my feelings of animosity towards different races past a general disliking of them because they are different, not "equal." As I grew older, things became clearer about the behavior of non-Whites and their inability to function as productive members of society, but I was unable to articulate this to myself or to others... I knew there were differences between races, but I was too caught up with my own struggles to delve deeper.

It wasn't until I began working for [a politician] that I saw how completely inefficient our government is. I was still naïve in thinking there was a democratic solution to our problems if only we could vote the right people into office. I soon came to see that both parties are actively selling out Whites and working against White interests in the name of Political Correctness and diversity. Black politicians here wield enormous influence in state politics, effectively making it impossible for White interests to be represented even if there were any White politicians who had the stomach to fight for White majority interests... White genocide continues unabated and the vast majority of our people have no idea we are in a war for our lives, let alone that we are losing that war. Our political system has been thoroughly corrupted by its Jewish controllers and there is no political answer to what ails our people. Realizing this was the last vestige to fall before I could begin to accept the truth. Now I utterly believe that the only work worthy of my complete devotion is for the survival and prosperity of the White race. I look forward to becoming a productive Alliance member, doing my part. Great Regards! — J.G., Maryland

Commentary by Chairman William White Williams

Learning from Our Founder

Jim Mathias had posed the following question on an Internet discussion board:

> While reviewing http://williamlutherpierce.blogspot.com/ I noted a link to an Alliance BULLETIN from the late 1990s with a title that contained the words "Patience and Tenacity." Upon clicking, it directed me to some strange Web site that was of no help. That article ought to contain some thoughts that could assist us at bringing consciousness of Cosmotheism to our people. Any idea where this article might be found?

Back in late 2011, when the Alliance was close to flat-lining and it looked like things were not going to get any better under its then-existing management, I asked Hadding Scott to launch the WLP Legacy blog. We started adding content, mostly by transcribing old pre-Internet articles by Dr, Pierce from National Vanguard magazine, so they'd be digitized for sharing with others online. The problem with those BULLETINs on the blog is they were not digitized, but were facsimile copies. Who knows to where they disappeared? They might have been hosted on a commercial image hosting service that has canceled our account. That's the problem with so much that's found on the Internet that is supposed to be "permanent." It's not.

Curious to answer Jim's question I found out that the title of Dr. Pierce's Commentary in the October 1997 issue of the BULLETIN was "Tenacity and Patience." Then, searching through old issues in our archive, I found that month's copy. His inspiring commentary to Alliance members 21 years ago reads as fresh today as then, and is arguably even more relevant today because our shrinking race's situation is much more urgent than it was in 1997. So I transcribed it and we herewith republish it, unedited. In that same issue of the BULLETIN, Dr. Pierce provided for us an example of how members can be creative and, using sound judgment, carefully plan to take advantage of an opportunity to spread the Alliance's message. All that follows below are Dr. Pierce's words to us. I can't say it any better than he. W. W. W.

Using Other People's Meetings

In the 1960s and 1970s, before Political Correctness had become firmly established on university campuses everywhere, the Jews customarily organized disruptions of lectures and meetings on their campuses whenever they saw any propaganda advantage to themselves in doing so. Some of the people whose meetings or lectures they disrupted were people at least implicitly hostile to Jewish goals — the late William Shockley, for example — but they even attacked people friendly to them when that served their purposes: people associated with the government's war effort in Vietnam, for example.

We don't have the Jews' numbers or resources — such as the use of their Black auxiliaries for the physical intimidation of opponents, friendly media to report our activities, or unlimited funds for bail bonds in the event of arrests — but hostile participation in other people's public or semi-public meetings nevertheless can be an effective activity for those of our members who are able to handle public confrontations well. A recent example illustrates this.

On October 20 Jean-Bertand Aristide, the Clintonistas' former puppet president of Haiti, was the invited speaker at a lecture on poverty at the University of North Carolina. The lecture was held in the university's Memorial Hall on the Chapel Hill campus and was attended by approximately 2,000 persons, most of them Clintonistas, trendy airheads, or media representatives, but there also were a number of interested students in the audience. Two Alliance members also attended: North Carolina Regional Coordinator Will Williams and Raleigh Local Unit Coordinator Kent Hansen.

At the end of Aristide's lecture there was a question-and-answer period, and Will Williams rose to ask two questions. He asked Aristide to explain exactly what the term "necklacing" means. Aristide declined to answer, and then Mr. Williams read from an article ("Bringing Democracy to Haiti") in the November-December 1994 issue of National Vanguard a quote from a 1991 speech in Port-au-Prince by Aristide in which he explicitly urged his followers to "necklace" his political opponents: "[I]f you see a faker who pretends to be one of our supporters... just grab him. Make sure he gets what he deserves... with the tool you have now in your hands, the 'necklace.'... You have the right tool in your hands... the right instrument. What a beautiful tool we have! What a nice instrument! It is nice, it is chic, it is classy, elegant and snappy. It smells good, and wherever you go you want to smell it."

After reading this quote in full Mr. Williams then reminded Aristide that dozens of his opponents were in fact "necklaced" after his 1991 speech. At this point the moderator cut off Mr. Williams' microphone, but he shouted out the second question: "Please, Mr. President, tell the audience exactly what is "necklacing" and whether or not you said these words." Aristide again refused to answer, and this ended the question-and-answer period [and the event].

Many students gathered around Mr. Williams and Mr. Hansen as the audience left the lecture, and they were handed xeroxed copies of the National Vanguard article from which Mr. Williams had quoted. A contact address and telephone number, as well as the Alliance's Internet address and the times and frequencies for American Dissident Voices broadcasts, were stamped on each copy. Several lively conversations developed. One professor [fluent in Aristide's Creole language] approached Mr. Williams and told him he had a recording of the speech Aristide had given in 1991 and recognized the part which had been quoted.

Although the local newspaper, the Raleigh News and Observer, carried a lengthy report of the lecture, it dealt in a cursory manner with the opposition to Aristide, mentioning neither Mr. Williams nor the Alliance by name: "The evening wasn't without controversy... During a question-and-answer session, two people confronted Aristide with accusations that his supporters 'necklaced' people who opposed him."

Of course, members should never waste their time heckling a speaker or attempting to disrupt a meeting unless they have planned the activity carefully in advance, prepared themselves to utilize the opportunity fully (as Will Williams and Kent Hansen did), by supplying themselves with copies of the National Vanguard article on Aristide), and can reasonably hope to gain some advantage for the Alliance. Such activity should never be undertaken merely to make our enemies uncomfortable or to amuse ourselves.

Tenacity and Patience

There are many traits of character that are desirable in a person engaged in our endeavor, but I can think of none more valuable than tenacity. Tenacity, combined with patience and good judgment, can conquer the world.

This is all the more true these days when there are so many moral cripples, born losers, and grown-up mama's boys among our people: the products of two generations raised on television and permissiveness; men and women whose mothers always picked up and cleaned up after them, even when they were teenagers; whose fathers sometimes yelled, "Don't do that!" or, "Be quiet and do your homework!" but never followed up on their commands; who learned from watching television as children that every problem has an easy solution and every bad situation eventually has a happy ending. Such people are not problem solvers. They have no staying power and cannot overcome major obstacles. They nearly always choose the path of least resistance. They cannot win against people who are made of tougher stuff.

Tenacity is a winning characteristic, both at the individual level and at the organizational level. A tenacious individual, once he has decided what he wants to accomplish, is not deterred by setbacks, obstacles, or failures. He learns from every setback and failure, and he persists until he overcomes every obstacle. A tenacious organization, having set its objectives and its general strategy, pursues those objectives until it achieves them, no matter what tactics it must use, no matter what sacrifice must be made, and no matter how long it takes.

The Alliance has set as its objectives securing the physical existence of our people and organizing them in a society governed by our ideology.

We would like to achieve these objectives within a few years and with the minimum losses to our own people, but we will achieve them, even if it takes us centuries, requires us to endure generations of outlawry and repression, and only a small fraction of our population survives the intervening chaos. We are willing to endure anything, because the alternative is extinction. Because of this, we have designed our organization to be tenacious. We have designed it to endure and survive and continue toward its goals until it reaches them.

We have observed the passivity and selfishness and cowardice of our people, who continue to collaborate with our enemies as long as there seems to be some personal, short-term advantage to them in doing so, and we have focused our recruiting efforts on the small minority of our people whose character and idealism lead them to do what is right rather than what is momentarily advantageous. Which is to say, we have built the Alliance on people able and willing to make a long-term commitment rather than on people looking for a quick and easy solution with the next election.

We have observed the long-term decay in morale of the government; the inevitable increase in fundamental weaknesses in the economy as the average quality of the work force declines and the welfare burden mounts; and the growing alienation of the population from the government as demographic inhomogeneity, official corruption, and an increasingly unnatural life-style take their toll. We have based our strategy on these long-term trends rather than on any momentary economic dislocations or governmental scandals. Our tactics, on the other hand, are adapted to take momentary advantage of momentary changes.

We have made a special effort to recruit members who are involved in every key profession and institution in our society, rather than simply building a generalized mass membership. It is our aim to grow like a living organism – sometimes rapidly, sometimes slowly, but always growing – until we are able to duplicate within our own ranks all of the essential features of the society around us.

These are our design criteria for building a tenacious organization. To meet these criteria, we must continue to persuade the best and brightest among our people to join us and make our goals their goals. And we must continue to build our other resources. We must have continuity in members, in ideas, and in resources. We have made some progress in developing the basis for this continuity, but we need more.

In the area of financial resources, for example, we have been fortunate in being able to build a small amount of capital assets, so that we can have a reasonable hope of being able to weather a storm of moderate severity without having to scramble and make emergency appeals. We are still a long way, however, from being strong enough financially to defeat a determined, long-term effort by our enemies to destroy us. For that we need at least ten times the reserves we have now.

Members who want to help us build our organizational tenacity can do so simply by making the Alliance the beneficiary of their wills. If we must fight from generation to generation, then we must grow stronger from generation to generation. Inheritance can become a big part of our growing financial strength. Any member who would like to help the Alliance in this regard but is uncertain of the details of the process should contact the National Office for information.
